THE BARK OF THE DOG.

It is a fact that wild dogs do not bark. They whine, growl, howl, but the true bark is never heard among them. The explosive noise familiar to us all in the bark of the domestic dog is undoubtedly an acquired faculty. In a word, the barking of the domesticated dog is an effort on the animal's part to speak, which he derives from is association with man. The dog's bark is, of course, varied in its expression. When the highly successful extravaganza, "THE WIZARD OF WISE-LAND" will be presented. The book of this much talked of attraction has a well outlined plot, according to press criticisms, and music and lyrics are of a strictly meritorious type. A strong company of singers and comedians, assisted by an excellent chorus and ballet, from all accounts have been appearing to crowded houses in every city visited. The proof of the pleasure afforded by the performances in these places lies in the fact that return dates have been asked for by many managers, so that music and amusement lovers here may expect a high-class and enjoyable, event. The scenery and costumes used in this merry trip into the weird and be sutiful mythiand are said to be of the most larish type, the transformations alone being marvels of acenic art and ingeneity.

This attraction has or joyed a run of one hundred and thirty-eight performances in Chicago, and it was pronounced a a musue falt,
